WESTFORD.

Center. Mr. and Mrs. Houghton G. Osgood were in attendance at the Byam-Hall wedding Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Albert W. Heywood, who underwent a serious operation at the Lowell general hospital Thursday of last week, is now convalescing.

Party. William R. Carver entertained a very pleasant party of about forty friends at her home last Saturday afternoon. Progressive whist was enjoyed during the evening.

Tadmuck Club. A good musical number in the Tadmuck club calendar proves a drawing number. This was the case Tuesday afternoon when a good-sized audience of members and guests gathered to enjoy the delightful program given by the ladies' Titanic orchestra of Lowell, assisted by Mrs. Lahey, contralto soloist.

Action Postponed. Much justifiable apprehension has been felt by our residents over the prospect of discontinuance of our so-called first train in the morning and also the noon train in the evening on the railroad.

Obituary. It brought sadness to her many friends in this village when it became known Thursday that Miranda G. Luce had died, but with a thankful heart to those who realized how ill she was that had come from her long imprisonment of pain, death was not unexpected for she had suffered for many months with a lingering illness.

Obituary. The death of this sister Miss Luce's life has been a lonely one except for her nephew's visits and her brave, outreaching spirit toward her many friends.

Obituary. Charles H. Corbin died at Westchester last Saturday after a lingering illness at the age of eighty-two years. He was a native of Tyngsboro, but had lived in Westford for many years.

Obituary. John J. Harwood died at Westchester last Saturday after a lingering illness at the age of eighty-two years. He was a native of Tyngsboro, but had lived in Westford for many years.

and in the battle of Williamsburg. In the latter engagement he received a flesh wound in the hip and his captain was killed.

The noted southern general, Stonewall Jackson, was the next object of attack, the result being the battle of Kettle Run, which was the next battle fought.

Leaving the hospital on November 10, 1862, he returned to his home, which was then at Clinton. He had changed so much during his service that for a time he was not recognized by his family.

Their first duty came when the riot in New York city and Boston broke out. In Boston they were obliged to use their swords from the northern railroad station to the barracks on Beach street and the Cooper street armory where they saved the government arms and ammunition from falling into the hands of the rioters.

Mr. Craig was mustered out at his own request on February 24, 1864. Through the assistance of President Lincoln he then secured a position as messenger in the war department, being mounted and detailed as orderly to Captain Barker at Savannah, acting quartermaster and was in Savannah when the execution of General Johnston's troops came to a surrender.

Mr. Craig came north soon after and joined his folks, who were then living at Westford. Mr. Craig, as will be seen from the foregoing, has a particularly fine record in his country's service.
