 Frank Tolman, aged thirty years, of Ayer, a fireman on a Boston and Maine freight train running between here and Northampton by way of Greenfield, was instantly killed at 5.30 o'clock on Thursday afternoon at Farley station by a passing engine. According to the information gathered, Tolman was leaning out of the side of the cab to discover if possible the trouble with the firebox grates which appeared to be out of order. While thus engaged an engine going in the opposite direction struck him in a fatal blow on the head. Tolman's home is in Greenville, N. H., but has been rooming at Percival T. Dix's, Groton street, since he was injured. He leaves a widow formerly known as Miss Batchelder, of Greenville, N. H., and a two-year-old son.

 While on his ice route last Saturday morning William Wood discovered a brindle bull dog which was evidently suffering from some cause. Mr. Wood took him to Wheeler's shop and Chief Beatty was notified. The chief brought the dog to the police station where for a time it was thought it was suffering from rabies. Later symptoms of poisoning developed together with partial paralysis. It was found necessary to chloroform the animal to end its suffering. There was no collar or anything about the dog to indicate who its owner was. This is the third case which has come to the notice of the police recently of dogs who had all the appearance of being poisoned. Such a condition might result from other than intentional causes, such as being poisoned by arsenate of lead, where the trees have been sprayed or from other causes.

 William J. Wilson was arraigned Tuesday under the uniform desertion act, the complainant being his wife, Rosie Wilson, who claimed he failed to provide for her and children. The husband denied the charge. After hearing a portion of the evidence, Judge Atwood, at the defendant's request, continued the case until Saturday, August 1, in order that more evidence might be procured.
 Joseph Hanbury, John Wilson and Joseph Denny, with addresses in the village of Northampton, were found guilty of vagrancy and the cases were filed.
 Benjamin Hamilton, a colored boy of fourteen years, was taken in charge by the police on Thursday as he had no means and was without food or shelter. In court on Friday morning he showed a contract with a circus which was duly filed out in which he was to receive so much per month and board. He joined the circus on July 3, and not liking the position resigned when his employer gave him but one dollar. The boy tells an apparently straight-forward story and presented an unusually good appearance. He says his home is in Newport Station, N. S. An effort was made Friday to find a relative of the boy in Boston by Thomas F. Mullin, probation officer.
St. Mary's Field Day.
 The St. Mary's parish field day and carnival of sports in aid of St. Mary's church was held at the town park on last Saturday and was a most successful event in every way, the weather making it an ideal day for such an occasion.
 A baseball game between Ayer and Shirley opened the program, Ayer winning the game after making a garrison finish in the ninth inning, coming from behind and scoring four runs, the final score being 7 to 6. Joe Wood, the famous Red Sox pitcher, was scheduled to umpire the game, but at the last moment it was found necessary to send Egan, the catcher, secured from Baltimore, to umpire the game which he did in a very satisfactory manner.
 Donahue and Hurley were in the points for Ayer, and Morrell and Connors for Shirley, both batteries doing fine work.

 Each of the rival teams were out to win and the game was a most interesting one and attracted the attention of the large audience. Both sides had loyal supporters which were continually encouraging their respective teams. The Ayer team was apparently defeated when it went to bat for the final inning, as the score was decidedly in Shirley's favor, but by one of their famous last inning rallies, the home team got enough across the plate to win.
 One of the greatest athletic events ever held in this section followed the ball game, the entries consisting of some of the best amateurs in this state. Matt Leary, the widely known sportsman of East Boston, was in charge of this part of the program and every event was run off with clock-like regularity.
 The races were well contested and received the closest attention of those present. Joe Silver, of the B. A. A., the widely known runner and winner of several noted events, including a marathon run from Ashland to Boston, who entered the miles run, was obliged to give up through illness when the race was nearly over. Silver was the great favorite in this event and it was thought he would be an easy winner. His chances appeared good until he was overcomen.
 The following are the winners, the contestants being from Boston, unless otherwise noted, the prizes being some silver cups and a punch bowl of the same material.
 100-yd. dash—F. A. Keohane, B. A. A.; 1st: C. C. Desaulniers, unattached; 2d: Kent Royal, of Harvard, B. A. A.; 3d: 380-yd. run—H. F. Mahoney, B. A. A.; 1st: J. P. Higgins, Holy Cross, 2d: J. J. Higgins, Holy Cross, 3d: J. J. Higgins, Holy Cross.
 Three-mile run—James Henigan, Dorchester club, 1st; David Neagle, Iveside A. C., 2d; A. F. Merchant, Riverside A. C., 3d.
 Running high jump—Morris Ligon, Fitchburg high school, 1st; H. Sullivan, Fitchburg, 2d; J. J. Higgins, Holy Cross, 3d. Highest jump, 5ft. 4in.
 440-yd. run—F. T. Donahue, unattached.
 Ligon gave a splendid exhibition and proved to be the best one in this contest. When he cleared the bar at its highest mark he was given rounds of applause.
 There were two sparring exhibitions given in the evening, one bout being between Dan (Porky) Flynn and Byers, and the second one between Boston Jerry Gardner and Joe Egan, the contests being purely an exhibition nature, no decisions being rendered.
 A general good time and dancing were the closing features of the day. There was an official time taken in the athletic events as the track was not an official one. It is estimated that there were between 2500 and 3000 people present during the day, many of whom came from neighboring towns and cities, including delegations from Boston, Worcester, Lowell and Fitchburg.
 Rev. Thomas P. McGinn, Rev. Patrick A. Sharkey, J. B. O'Connell, sr., the president, present and chairman, respectively, of the St. Mary's Parish association were in charge of the day's celebration.
 Children's games were under the supervision of Mrs. Joseph Mullin, baseball, Dr. L. D. Sullivan and John H. Hooley; athletics, (A. A. U.) Matt Leary; boxing, Edward Lane. Other committees were as follows:

Mullin; baby doll, Patricia O'Connell; doll, Mrs. Lillian Moore; hand embroidered pin cushion, Miss Catherine O'Neill; gold bracelet, Miss Margaret Deland, Gardner; set hand painted pins, Rev. There was seven ties in the guessing contest for the name of the doll, the name Salem being given by Governor Walsh. The contest was afterward settled by making the award to Miss Grace Burns.
 The North Chelmsford Training School band furnished the music.
 Among the visitors were former mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge, Facey of the same city. Mr. Barry was much pleased at the natural beauties of the town park which he said was one of the finest and best located that he had ever seen. Rev. James Lynch, of Brockton, a former curate of St. Mary's church, was also present at the exercises throughout the day.

Littleton opens wide her gates to all her returning sons, daughters and friends from near and far, irrespective of race, color, caste or religion.

Many hundreds of announcements have been sent, but it is impossible to think of everybody. Kindly regard with tolerance the committee in charge of the announcements. They have conscientiously attempted to locate all who would be interested in the celebration. But to reach everyone is beyond them and they can only say "Welcome to those who wish to enter with the townspeople into the spirit of the day at the occasion."

In reply to a question frequently asked: "Must I pay a dollar and sit at the banquet in order to hear the after-dinner speakers?" we say "No." The speaking will be for all who wish to hear and a memorial to our heroism is farthest from the minds of those who have charge of the affair."

Birthdays Party. The two sisters, Mrs. Ella P. Woolley and Mrs. Alice J. Moore, plotting in love to honor and please their mother, Mrs. Juliet Stone, arranged for the celebration of her eighty-sixth birthday at their home on Court street last week Friday.

The birthday was really on Sunday, July 19, but they thought best to hold the observation party on July 17. Mrs. Stone was visiting in Fallowburg, so on Thursday Mrs. Woolley went over to accompany her mother home.

Mrs. Stone was so observant enough to see that there was something a little unusual going on, but by no means grasped the whole affair until she sat down to the birthday dinner.

Conspicuous in the feast of good things was the handsome birthday cake with the word "MOTHER" in small colored candy, showing up plainly on the white frosting. Mrs. Stone was showered with postcards, letters and other birthday remembrances, among which was a boxful of eighty-six roses.

A telegram came from her daughter, Mrs. Clara Felton, in Michigan, who regretted much that she could not be present. Mrs. Stone's only son, Austin Stone, and wife, from Somerville, were among those at the family gathering.

The recipient of all these kind attentions was deeply touched and expressed herself as having passed one of her happiest days. Fire. At 1.45 on Friday morning the sound of explosions, shouts and the ringing of the church bell startled the village from sleep and people awoke to a crimson sky, shooting flames and flying sparks, and later to the knowledge that the leatherboard mill was in flames.

A broken bell rope made it almost impossible to get out, and there was the necessary delay of rousing men from sleep and the gathering of scattered firemen. The fire increased rapidly and in the main hall things were soon beyond control. This morning the corner was struck by the stockhouses and the drier building. Several cars standing on the track were saved.

The G. H. Bixby and Tarbell houses within a few feet of the blazing building owe their safety to the perfect stillness of the night and the rain during Thursday. It is a terrible loss, but we realize the possibilities of the "might have been" and are thankful that no dwellings were destroyed. It will mean loss of employment to quite a number of men.

The watchman, George Washington, reports that at one o'clock all was still, as far as he could see, and forty-five minutes later the entire main building was a mass of roaring flames. The cause of the fire and of the explosions, heard have not been determined. The books from the safe were saved.

It is too early to speak with any certainty of the money loss, or the probability of re-building. Great sympathy is felt for the losers and the employees, and sorrow at the loss sustained by the village.

Deaths. Death claimed Orrin Wing, one of Littleton's oldest and most respected citizens on Tuesday, July 21. Mr. Wing had done his customary work in the morning for he was a very industrious man, but his appetite, none too good of late, had required but little food, and the body, worn with age and desisting sufficient nourishment to restore vitality, had gradually become weaker until the peaceful separation from the spirit on Tuesday. He was fond of walking and indulged in this pastime daily. About a month ago he walked to Ayer to visit his daughter, and later went to Lowell, where he visited his sister. The deceased was born in Wayne, Me., August 10, 1825, and lived to be 88 yrs. 11 mos. 11 days old.

He was a stone cutter by trade and had done many buildings, including that used in the construction of Lowell jail. He possessed a good knowledge of carpentry also. Fifty-six years ago he cut the lumber and built the house in which he has ever since lived. For eight years he was foreman for the Harvard or Sprague, in early life he married Miss Lydia Sprague, daughter of John Sprague, who lived on the place now owned by E. P. Sheehan. Mrs. Wing's death occurred three years ago.

Mr. Wing possessed a strong constitution. Six years ago he experienced an attack of bronchitis, and with that exception had enjoyed the best of health throughout his long life. Perhaps this may be accounted for in part also by the fact that he was quiet, his bills paid, lived at peace with everybody, conducted his business on principles of strict integrity and he had no ill to tell of towards any man. He was a hard worker and extremely unpretentious, but a most reliable and substantial man whose word was as good as his bond. His conscience and intelligence played an important part in all the activities of his life.

Mr. Wing has been affectionately cared for by his dutiful son Herbert and his faithful daughter Susie, who have always remained at the old home. Besides these, two daughters, Mrs. Cochran and Mrs. Nixon, of Ayer, a son Arthur of Lowell, six grandchildren and a sister, Miss Frances Wing of Lowell, survive him.

The funeral was held from Mr. Wing's late home on Thursday afternoon and Rev. H. L. Caulking officiated. The burial was in the family lot in Westlawn cemetery.

Friends of Henderson Feyler were shocked to learn of his sudden death on Tuesday, July 21. He was at work in a potato field, and as he did not appear when the shower came the workmen went to the place where they had last seen him and found his body prostrate among the vines. No answer came in response to their call. This morning the corner was struck by the stockhouses and the drier building. Several cars standing on the track were saved.

An accident of a few years ago had resulted in broken limbs and an fatherly man, very uncomplaining and he left the house after breakfast in apparently normal condition. With a pleasant word to his family and the neighbors as he went about his daily work in the morning Mr. Feyler passed beyond their visible horizon into the realm of the immortal.

Prayers were offered at the home on Thursday forenoon by Rev. H. L. Caulking and services were held at Edson cemetery in Lowell, where interment was made.

A widow, Marietta Knight Feyler; a son, Irving W., who lived at home; a daughter, Mrs. Ethel M. Hall, of Lynde, a grandchild, Arthur Hall; two sisters, Mrs. Martha Wiggin, of Lowell, N. B., and Mrs. William Hill, of Lowell, and two brothers, Allen and George, of Waldoboro, Me., survive the deceased.

Mr. Feyler was born in Waldoboro, Me., on March 1, 1850, and at the time of his death had reached the age of 64 yrs. 4 mos. 20 days. From boyhood his home had been chiefly in this vicinity. A few years he made his home in Bowdoin, previous to his removal to Littleton seven years ago.

A good man; a kind, thoughtful and congenial neighbor, a home-loving, devoted husband and a father who has passed suddenly from our sight, but the pleasant memories linger with the dear ones who have sustained an unspeakable loss in his death, and the sympathy of their many friends is extended to the bereaved widow, and family in the trying experience which has come so suddenly into their lives.

ITEMS OF INTEREST. In the days of the land troubles in Ireland, two farmers, Pat and Mike, were concealed behind a hedge with heavy bludgeons, awaiting the return of their landlord from the city to kill him. The landlord was detained much later than usual and Pat began to grow impatient. "Mike," said Pat in hoarse whisper, "I wonder what's keeping him?" "I dunno," said Mike anxiously, "I hope nothing's happened to him." France's colonies are 18 times as big as herself and Great Britain 97 times bigger than herself.

Lodge Presented with Flag.

At the regular communication of St. Paul lodge in June, T. E. Flarity, master, gave an account of the meeting of the grand lodge which he attended the week before in Boston, and gave an account of the presentation to the grand lodge of an American flag, which ceremony, he stated, was the most inspiring one he ever witnessed in a lodge room and expressed the wish that some day the Stars and Stripes might be made part of the working equipment of St. Paul lodge.

The suggestion was quickly taken up by the members and as a beautiful silk flag was purchased by the members, each contributing a small amount, and was presented at the meeting on Monday afternoon. It is a beautiful silk flag with woven stripes in the Government regulation size, 52x65 inches, with yellow silk fringe and a gilt cord. It is mounted on an eight-foot staff with waterproof covering and has a belt and shoulder straps for carrying on the street.

The presentation was made by Rev. George M. Howe, chaplain, of Groton, who spoke in substance as follows:

From the settlement of Jamestown in 1602, and Plymouth in 1620, the flag of England was the flag of the colonists. The king's color, however, which had all forts, castles and men-of-war, but the white ensign with the red cross was the flag of the people. The protest of the colonists against the unjust treatment which they received at the hands of the mother country led to the adoption of "Liberty Bells" in every colony.

In 1775 a flag was adopted by the colonists to mark their claim for securing by force, if necessary, their rights as Englishmen. On June 4, 1777, one year after the declaration of independence, the Continental Congress which consisted of thirteen stripes with its union of thirteen stars, a new constitution, symbolize the birth of a new nation.

During our entire history as a republic our flag has been the standard of a country, not a personal standard of a king or potentate. It stands for us today as a symbol of an abstract idea, not as the sign of the power of any earthly ruler. It is, and ever has been, a national flag, not a personal standard.

This beautiful flag is something more than a thing made up of colored bits of cloth. It is the history of our nation in symbol and color. The flag stands for the past history of a people, at least of that part of which they are especially proud. It stands for the truth they believe in; it stands for the principles which they profess. The rare combination of colors which go to make it the most beautiful flag in the world is of special significance to every Mason.

White stands for purity, a principle forcibly inculcated by the obligation which this noble order imposes upon all its members. Red symbolizes valor or color, an element of character which should be manifested by every loyal Mason as he engages in the affairs of daily life. The courage to stand and be counted when the principles of the order and its fundamental principles are attacked. Blue stands for fidelity. That spirit which enables a Mason to obey God's law as given in his holy word. As Masons it is our duty, not only to honor the flag for what it represents, but to cherish a loyal devotion to the principles which it emphasizes and inculcates.

The acceptance of the gift in behalf of St. Paul lodge was made by T. E. Flarity, master, of Townsend, who spoke as follows: My worthy brother, in behalf of St. Paul lodge, I accept for your hands this beautiful flag as a gift from the members of the lodge and as evidence of their patriotic love of country and a desire to make the "Old Flag" part of the working equipment of the lodge. I know I voice the sentiments of the members of St. Paul lodge when I say Amen to the splendid thoughts and patriotic sentiments you have uttered.

One month ago when I expressed the wish that old St. Paul lodge might have old Glory as part of the regular working equipment of the lodge, I did not realize that the members would take the matter up so promptly and respond so liberally, but my dream of last month is a reality to a day, and

AYER, MASS.

REMEMBER—We close TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY EVENINGS at 6.30 and at 12 o'clock noon on THURSDAYS during July and August

I say with all sincerity that no part of my work as master of this lodge has given me quite so much satisfaction as the privilege of standing here and accepting this beautiful flag. The late Senator George F. Hoar once paid this remarkable tribute to the flag: "I have seen the glories of art and architecture and of river and mountain. I have seen the sunset on the Jungfrau and the moon rise over Mount Blanc, but the fairest vision on which these eyes ever rested was the flag of my country in a foreign port. Beautiful as a flower to those who love it, terrible as a meteor to those who hate it—it is the symbol of the power and the glory and the honor of one hundred million Americans. Many of us have not been fortunate enough to see the flag in a foreign port, but every true Mason will subscribe to the noble sentiments of the great statesman. To the flag, the Old Glory, we consecrate these to the order of old St. Paul lodge. It is my order that you shall be present at every meeting of the lodge, and your beautiful stars and stripes may ever be an inspiration to our members to aspire to the highest and the noblest type of American citizenship. Let your presence attest the fact that Freemasonry stands to day, where it has always stood in the past, for righteousness and good government, and let me assure you that the members of this, the oldest and grandest fraternal organization on the face of the earth, will stand today as they stood in the early history of our country, when the great leaders of our grand old fraternity were the leaders in founding this grand American republic, shoulder to shoulder to uphold its glorious institutions and preserve your beautiful stars and stripes which have been consecrated by the life blood of so many thousands of our citizen soldiers.

The Flag Here comes the flag! Here comes the flag! Who dares to drag it? Give it hurrahs—Three for the stars, Three for the bars, Uncover your head to it! The soldiers who tread to it Shout at the sight of it. The justice and right of it, The unsullied white of it, The blue and red of it, And tyranny's dread of it. Here comes the flag. Cheer it! Valley and crag Shall hear it. Fathers shall bless it, Children careen it. All shall maintain it, No one shall stain it. Cheers for the sailors that fought on the wave for it, Cheers for the soldiers that always were brave for it, Tears for the men that went down to the grave for it. Here comes the flag! The exercises were closed by singing "America" and a salute to the flag by all the brothers.

Clippings. The engagement is announced of John A. Hart, proprietor of the Chickering hotel, and Miss Bertha Skelley, both of Putnam, Conn. They will be married at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Skelley, in Norwich, Conn., in November by Rev. Fr. O'Reilly. Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the Chickering. Mr. Hart has made many friends in Putnam by a disposition which is invariably good natured. He has the best wishes of all who know him. Mr. Hart is a former resident of this town and a recent proprietor of the Union house in Ayer. The ceremony of blessing a statue of St. Joseph and child took place at St. Bridget's church, Amherst, recently. The statue is a gift of John A. Hart of Putnam, Conn., formerly of Amherst, in memory of his wife, Mrs. Ellen M. Hart, who died recently.

Round Up. Chief of Police Beatty and Constables, Lyman J. Taylor, John M. Wallace and James H. O'Connell, rounded up six hoboes on East Main street shortly after six o'clock Monday evening. Complaints had reached the chief a short time before of the suspicious actions of the party and preparations for their capture were begun. The party dispersed and ran in all directions when the officers appeared in sight, but they were all finally captured after a short flight. They were taken to the police station, where the night was spent. They gave their names as Joseph Laine Perigny of Boston, John McDonald and Paul Murphy of Stoneham and Russell H. Lane of Medford. Each was examined separately while the remainder were excluded from the court room Tuesday morning in order to get the truth of their stories regarding their being here. The testimony varied a good deal in some of the cases, while the others agreed fairly well. Murphy, Lane and their way to Ayer to get a job on the state road and had come directly here from their homes for that purpose. Eynes and Laine were the smallest and youngest in the bunch and appeared more fit for the kindergarten school than for the road looking for work. The oldest of the party was but twenty-one years of age. Their cases were placed on file.

A Former Ayer Boy.

Frank Leon Smith, of New York, has been visiting his parents in Everett, and returned last week to correct the final proofs on a story he has lately written in collaboration with James Shelley Hamilton. This story will appear soon in Everybody's magazine. Frank has recently had an operation on his nose for the removal of polypus growth and a section of bone, which obstructed the nasal passage. This was probably caused by a fall when he was a pupil in the Ayer schools, and when his left arm was in a plaster cast from fracture, although his breathing was not affected until more recent years. However, the specialist has successfully treated the trouble and Frank is much benefited in health. He has been invited to go to Northern New York in a few weeks to look on and perhaps take part in the staging of Cooper's novel, "The Last of the Mohicans," for moving picture films. In the early winter he hopes to take a trip abroad and incidentally gather material and local color for future stories.

LUNENBURG.

News Items. Last Sunday evening a simple memorial service was observed in the celebration of the 110th anniversary of the founding of the Methodist church of Lunenburg. A brief history of the church which occurred in 1804, when Rev. Joshua Crowell was the pastor, was given by Rev. Alfred Noon, the present pastor, in which he related that the first church building was on a lot on the Northfield road, opposite the site of the present church. Some of the foundation stones are still lying there. Mr. Noon then read letters from former pastors or their descendants since 1853. They were filled with most interesting reminiscences of the church and its members. His pastorate here, and of the church as they knew it. Appropriate hymns were sung and a most interesting ten-minute talk to the young people was given by Rev. Mary L. Morland, of Mass. At the Congregational church last Sunday morning Rev. Mary L. Morland occupied the pulpit by invitation of the pastor, Rev. Robert A. Bryant. She gave a most interesting sermon upon "The Greater Vision." U. held an open-air meeting in the grove of Whalom Park on last week Thursday afternoon. Basket lunch and lemonade were served, after which all attended a very interesting address by Mrs. Hattie E. ## SINGSONG PETE

He Proves a Blessing In Disguise

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The lower rim of the sun rested on the edge of the horizon, a huge orange ball against the background of copper red sky.

Nancy Barton watched it slowly sink below the flat Texas plain until all at once it was gone and the weird twilight was about her.

With a little sigh she turned her horse to the low hills that bounded the northeast. Her black Judy skimmed over the ground with velvet feet, and the passage of the graceful girl and the beautiful animal were almost like shadows fleeing before the light western breeze.

Then as they passed into the deep gloom of a walnut grove Nancy heard rough voices in discussion. For a moment her heart thrilled with terror, for the Barton ranch was very near the Mexican border, and in these uncertain days there was a growing spirit of lawlessness among the rough characters that invested the neighborhood.

The voices came from a little hollow on the left of the trail, and Nancy was glad of the protection afforded by the great trees that surrounded her.

She pulled Judy to a standstill and listened sharply.

Five minutes afterward she had emerged from the grove and was tearing down the trail toward home.

Her appearance in the yard brought her father into the porch and the cook into the doorway of the bunk house.

"That you, Nan?" cried her father relievedly. "I've been wild about you for the last hour. I know you can take care of yourself, but remember what I told you about staying out after dark. Why, what is it, child? You are trembling." Mr. Barton lifted the girl from the saddle, and she sank limply on to the steps.

"You no see men, Miss Nancy?" shrieked Hep Loo across the yard. He waved a spoon toward his waiting supper table in the bunk house.

"They will come later, Hep Loo," said Nancy faintly, and as the Chinaman returned muttering to his kitchen she said to her father: "Dad, what shall we do? I came home through the grove, and I overheard our men here plotting to burn the ranch and run the cattle across the border."

"You are sure, daughter?" demanded Barton sharply, for he had trusted his cowboys to a man.

"Yes, I heard all their voices. Singsong Pete seemed to be the leader. It is planned for tonight."

"I wonder if they are coming back to supper," mused Barton.

"No, they planned the raid, and after it is accomplished they are to rush in and appear to rescue me. Oh, dad, they said they would finish you, and you know what that means—and—" Nancy's voice broke a little, and her father knew that when his brave daughter's courage wavered there was danger indeed, and he guessed that she had not told him all she had overheard.

"We need help. How shall we get it?" he muttered.

"Let me go, father. I am safer riding than I am here," she shuddered. "Where will you go, child? You could never ride to Fenby's in time, and—"

"I will go and get Roger Dare," said Nancy.

Mr. Barton started.

"Roger Dare?" he repeated. "He would never come after the way I treated him. I can't expect it. No man with red blood in him would do it."

"Roger would do it, dad," said Nancy quietly. "Just because he has got red blood in his veins helps he forgive an injury and help. He's a man!"

Barton stared down at the girl.

"Nancy! I believe—I believe you really did care!" He stopped short as Nan lifted her gloved hand.

"Dad, you can believe almost anything of a foolish girl," she whispered. "Give me a cup of tea and let me go. They are cowards, and they will not shoot me if I run across the gang, but I will go the lower trail if it will lessen your anxiety. You and Hep Loo remain in the house and protect the place." Nancy arose and ran into the house, where Aunt Hepsy, the stout negress, was waiting impatiently to serve supper.

Nancy drank a cup of tea and ate a few mouthfuls of food; then, with a last close embrace from her father, who had protested even while he saw that her pistols were loaded and that Judy was ready at the door, she swung into the saddle and vanished into the night.

Then James Barton worked swiftly. Within an hour the house was closely shuttered and loaded weapons placed at all the upper windows.

Silence fell over the ranch. Hepsy lumbered uneasily about her room, while Barton, kneeling in an upper window, watched the entrances by which the enemy might be expected. While he waited he thought of Nancy dying for help and asking Roger Dare, of all men!

In the darkness Barton blushed. When Roger Dare had first come to the cattle country the finger of suspicion had pointed heavily at him in a very dubious transaction. Barton had been one of his most relentless accusers; he had really believed the man guilty. There had been a lynching stopped at the critical instant by news of the capture of the guilty man, and Roger had been set free, but his stern attitude toward his accusers had told them that he had not forgotten the insult and injury their unjust accusations had brought upon him.

James Barton had made handsome apology for the injustice, and in more ways than one had been of service to the young rancher, but quite unknown to Roger, for it is probable that stern young man might have refused the aid that came from unknown sources. Then Barton's contrition had an added bitterness, for Roger had fallen promptly in love with Nancy, and there might have been a romance there on the Texas plain had not the unfortunate affair come up to blight it in the bud.

Now, this very evening Barton had discovered something in Nancy's tone that betrayed her secret. She loved Roger after all. That was what had worn upon her during the past year, although she had maintained her cheerful demeanor. He swore softly under his breath as he thought of how he had fallen after all to make his motherless daughter entirely happy, and that was all he lived for.

So James Barton waited for the enemy to come and burn his home, if they could, but his thoughts traveled side by side with the gallant young form speeding through the night surrounded by unseen dangers.

The lower trail led away from the chestnut grove and its concealed plotters. The trail skirted the foot of a hill and then followed the dry bed of Cinder creek, plunged through the narrow confines of Cinder canyon and emerged on Roger Dare's north range.

Nancy Barton, leaning low in the saddle, rode the miles unflinchingly. Her pride must suffer in going to Roger Dare for help. But what mattered? She thought of her brave, gray haired father standing off the crowd of desperadoes single handed, and she spurred Judy to greater effort.

The stones rattled in the dry bed of the creek, and then the dark plunge through the little canyon was accomplished with heaven only knows what hairbreadth escapes from death or disaster, and then Judy's feet pounded over the grass of Roger Dare's land.

A dog barked in the distance, a light flared in a window, other lights sprang out around the house, and when Nancy arrived on the almost winded mare she was at once surrounded by a circle of excited men, with Roger Dare in their midst.

"What has happened?" asked Roger, his hand on Judy's neck.

In a few broken words Nancy told him, and then, reeling in the saddle, she murmured:

"I'm not going to faint. I never fainted in my life." And she straightway proceeded to drop into Roger's outstretched arms.

"She has fainted away," said Roger as he laid her on a sofa in the sitting room. "Eliza," turning to his grim featured housekeeper, "there is trouble at the Barton ranch, and I must go, but watch over Nancy. You will know what to do, and guard her as you would your own child. Ben and Gallagher will remain with you."

With a last glance at the sweet, pale face on the pillow, Roger turned and rushed out into the yard, where his men were piling on to their horses. In a moment twenty of them were flying toward Cinder canyon, and the disgruntled Gallagher and his companion were left behind.

Long afterward old Hepsy tried to describe the battle of Barton's ranch, but words were inadequate.

"Lawdy, chile," she told her listener, "I jest wish you could've been here and seen how Mars Barton plinged dem snakes wid his gun, and right in de midst of it dere was a rarin' shout from de lower gate, and I declar' if Mars Roger Dare and his men didn't come skychootin' erlong, and—well, de war ended right off! Mars Roger and de rest of 'em jes driv dat Singsong Pete and de odder snakes clean off de place, and I heards dey went ovah de border inter Mexico, and a good place for 'em, too, wid de greasers! Uh, huh! Mars Roger am sure a brave man, but he ain't no braver den Mars Barton—no, suh!"

Roger Dare, coming back from that wild chase over the border in pursuit of Singsong Pete and his band, rode into the Barton yard and met Barton's hearty hand clasp with one equally warm. No one heard the few words they uttered as they stood there side by side, but that very instant the feud between them died.

There was a light patter of hoofs at the gate, and Nancy came riding in on Judy. The girl, her face now pale and rosy, slipped from the saddle and looked from her father to Roger Dare.

"I am so glad you are safe—safe, father," she sobbed, clinging to Barton. "I told you he would come!"

"Yes, darling," smiled Barton over her sunny head. "He has come, indeed, and he tells me that he has come to stay!"

Nancy was silent for awhile, and then she timidly put a hand toward Roger, her eyes still hidden on her father's sleeve. And when she lifted her eyes at last and looked shyly around she found herself standing hand in hand with her father and Roger Dare.

And Aunt Hepsy, who was an interested observer of this scene, was scandalized to hear her master exclaim: "Well, we can thank Singsong Pete for this!" and Roger's happy answer: "Heaven bless Singsong Pete!"

But on the wedding day Nancy explained what they meant.
